Tonight's Episode: Fair Play

There are rules when one attends the American International Toy Fair.

There's the stuff you can see. Then there's the stuff you can't see. And even more frustrating is the stuff you can see, but can't photograph. Or the toys you can see, but if you talk about them, men with shoulder-strapped Uzis concealed in their finely tailored suits will take you for "a little walk" outside Toy Fair's Broadway showrooms.

And then later you'll see classified postings soliciting new editors for toy magazines in The New York Times.

It's all very frustrating.

Y'see...Toy Fair is all about the buyers: those savvy men and women representing the Kay-Bees, Toys R Uses and Wal-Marts of the world. They get to see everything. And it is for their thumbs up, followed by purchases of X amount of toy units, that toy execs await with bated breath. That's why the showrooms sparkle, the action figures' missiles fire straight and true every time and the spokesmodels...well, the spokemodels just smile and make you feel handsome or pretty.

The press can't hold a candle to that.

Sure, we're the guys who cover Toy Fair with the greatest zeal, taking copious notes and shooting roll after roll of film, some of which we've shown in the last two months. Others, well...others we can't show. Or were barred from seeing. In an age where the Internet offers instantaneous access to just about any and all information, you can understand why toy and movie companies hold their offerings close to the belt.

I'd love to present the Godzilla toys offered by Trendmasters, plus Toy Biz's remote control 'Zilla offerings and ReSaurus' hand puppets. But I can't. In fact, the ToyFare staff wasn't even allowed to preview them. Despite begging and cajoling our various toy company pals, we were denied. You see, goons from Sony Pictures would have shot them on the spot. Nobody sees Godzilla...except the buyers. Buyers get to see everything...including Godzilla's gender. (He's a she this time around, by the way. Take that, Sony.)

And don't even think about the X-Files action figures from McFarlane Toys. By now, selected images—and ones very much approved by Chris Carter, 20th Century Fox, David Duchovny, Gillian Anderson and anyone else with a stake in the profit—have begun circulating. But the real goods, the juicy stuff (we're talking 'bout the aliens, baby!) is under lock and key. But toy buyers have seen it, judged it and based on their assessment, made their orders so Mulder and Scully action figures will be eagerly awaiting anxious collectors the minute "The X-Files" big-screen movie lets out its first showing.

The rest of us just have to wait our turn.

But not me.

Next year, I'll snatch up even the most secret action figure and dart out of the showroom.

Next year, those hired goons will have to pick off a moving target on Broadway and 29th as I gleefully show the world the latest action offering.

That's right. Next year, let the buyer beware.

FanFare

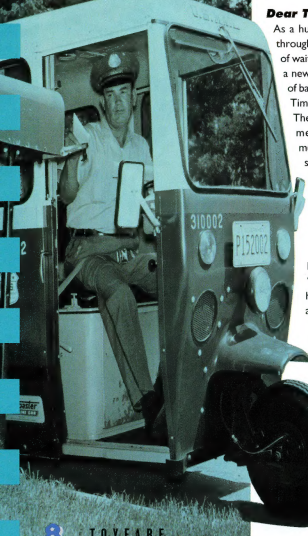
THE EMPIRE STRIKES OUT

Could there be any more love in this world for Star Wars? Maybe my reality's been skewed after reading several thousand letters from ToyFare readers over the past few months. It's possible. But I daresay that had George Lucas not blessed the world with the Star Wars Trilogy, the Commies would've taken over, all hope and love would've died and the sun would've burnt out.

So thanks, George.

The readers love, love, love Star Wars. But, as with any passion, it can turn dark and twisted if left unchecked, much like my passion for Katie, the sullen Vampirella model. This month's "FanFare" contains a small sliver of the Star Wars insanity I receive each day in my lil' mailbox.

Just check out this exasperated fan's tirade...



Dear ToyFare,

As a huge Star Wars fan, I've suffered through a lot. There was the eight years of waiting after "Return of the Jedi" for a new story to come out. The deluge of bad Star Wars books released after Timothy Zahn's The Last Command. The taunting of schoolmates calling me a geek because my favorite music comes from the "Star Wars" soundtrack. The three-month search for each new Star Wars figure. But somehow, it was a letter from a "fan" in ToyFare #7 pointing out Dengar's "good qualities" that caused me to snap.

A year or two ago, I would have been inclined to agree. "Dengar's from Star Wars," I would have said. "Everything Star Wars is awesome," I would have said.

Sadly, that couldn't be further from the truth.

I'm not afraid to admit that I love Star Wars, probably more than most of the people who read your magazine and definitely more than the balding guy strolling away from Aisle 7 with eight Slave Leia figures. It's because of that love for Star Wars that I have to point out that it's finally gone too far.

Think about it: just 15 years ago, Star Wars was simply a trilogy of amazing movies. Next, there were the first three books. Those, too, were awesome. But then there were more books. And more books. And new video games. And new comic books. And more books. And more and more...until, finally, Star Wars wasn't Star Wars anymore. Until Star Wars was represented by a fan claiming that a character with no speaking lines and about three seconds of screen time has a "sweet origin" and the ability to "get chicks."

This, my friends, isn't Star Wars; this is a sham. It's a disgrace. A disgrace that Boba Fett, whose best line is "Put Captain Solo in the cargo hold," is more popular than Darth Vader, who shocked the planet when he said "I am your father." A disgrace that books such as the horrendous Jedi Academy Trilogy and Tales of the Bounty Hunters are accepted as worthy of the title Star Wars. Yes, George Lucas has made billions off Star Wars' various licenses, but if he has any moral integrity at all, he must be appalled at how much his vision has been perverted.

So what can be done? Sadly, nothing. The bad books will keep coming out and the "fans" will keep buying them and accepting them simply because Luke Skywalker is mentioned. Star Wars figures will continue to be seen as investments and collector's items instead of creative outlets for young fans who want to act out their own adventures. And meanwhile, those of us who fully understood the scope and meaning of the epic story and actually appreciate it can do nothing more than sit by and watch as everything that made Star Wars what it was slowly fades into oblivion. The very thought makes me mad.

Leonard Finkelman
EmpThrawn@aol.com

I agree. As far as I'm concerned, the Star Wars story was suspended in 1983 after "Jedi," and will resume with the Prequels in 1999. None of that in-between stuff counts.

And now, Leonard, just because I'm a total jerk, check out this next letter...

Dear ToyFare,

In issue #7, James Hanna compared Dengar to Boba Fett. I'd like to share MY opinions....

1) Who cares if Dengar looks like Johnny Cash? That's not going to win him any fights!

2) Fett blasted out of the Sarlacc Pit on his own. He is the ONLY person to ever come out alive. Dengar was probably looking for a Jawa or something else to eat when he found Boba Fett and thought, "Hey, I'll save him, then maybe he'll let me team up with him and I can learn something so I'm not just a crappy, third-rate bounty hunter."

3) Dengar has cybernetic functions? That's fancy talk for pieces of metal jammed into your skin. By the time Dengar was able to use his cybernetic functions, Boba Fett would've pulped him. Y'see, Boba Fett wears Mandalorian combat armor that he has modified and equipped with the most lethal weapons in the galaxy.

4) Dengar has perhaps the lamest origin ever. He got hurt in a flying bike race. Boba Fett, on the other hand, has a cool, mysterious one.

5) Boba Fett gets women, too! Did you see the new scenes in "Return of the Jedi"? The dancers Rystall and Lyn Me are just hanging on him.

6) Dengar's ship is The Punishing One? Exactly what does Dengar punish? All the food that avalanches into his mouth? Slave I is an awesome ship with a cool name.

7) Dengar's nickname is "Payback," eh? Who cares? If you say "Boba Fett" in any corner of the galaxy, I'll bet you'll get the local scum's attention. Boba Fett needs no stupid nickname. He is Boba Fett. He is awesome.

Livio Ramondelli
State College, PA

Uhh...nice envelope, Livio.

All right, it's time to put the Dengar/Boba Fett competition to rest. Each camp has made a solid case. Sheesh, can you believe Dengar even HAS a camp? That's gotta be one sorry camp. Even sorrier than the "Saved by the Bell" camp. "Screech's inner turmoil gives the show its edginess!" Whatever.

Dear ToyFare,

I came up with my Top 10 list of Marvel boxed sets I want:

10) Skrulls

9) Sinister Six (the first incarnation)

8) Defenders (everybody I know wants 'em)

7) Brotherhood of Evil Mutants (first incarnation)

6) X-Men Gold

5) X-Men Blue

4) Thunderbolts (no-brainer)

3) Inhumans (7 inches of rooted hair on Medusa...'nuff said)

2) Classic Fantastic Four

1) Classic Avengers

Augie Pires
Waterbury, CT

What, no Enforcers? C'mon, Ox, Montana and Fancy Dan, plus a Big Man with removable mask revealing...Frederick Foswell!

Well, okay, maybe not.

Dear ToyFare,

Where does Jim Lee get off calling the 3 3/4-inch G.I. Joes "those piddly little turd-sized ones" ["Toying Around," ToyFare #7]?

Somebody should tell Mr. Lee that the Real American Hero had a very successful 12-year run from 1982-94, precisely the same length of time that the original 12-inch G.I. Joes were produced, from 1964-1976, and that if it weren't for the unqualified success of the 3 3/4-inch G.I. Joes, the 12-inch Joes never would have returned to the toy stores!

I am a fan of BOTH the 3 3/4-inch Joes and the current 12-inch Classic Collection, and I have all the respect in the world for the original 12-inch Joes from the '60s. What I DON'T have any respect for is the handful of fanatical die-hards, whom Mr. Lee's column is just going to encourage, that see no value in any G.I. Joe EXCEPT the original, and they expect everybody else to go along with them.

And speaking of respect, Mr. Lee should learn some, because he certainly lost mine, as well as that of any other G.I. Joe collector who enjoys the Real American Hero.

Thomas Wheeler
Tucson, Arizona

I think Jim actually did a pretty good job of explaining exactly why he thought the original Joes whomped all over the 1980s line. He felt the classic Joes, with the absence of Cobra, predetermined personalities and a TV tie-in, sparked his imagination far more than the 3 3/4-inch line could have. Having grown up in a 3 3/4-inch world, I have no idea if he's right. Brain...too...dull.

But hey, c'mon, Thomas. Part of the fun of being a collector is being able to tell the other guy his collection sucks.

Hey Tom!

I read that ToyFare #6's "Toy of the Month" was Loki, but when I bought one, it seemed rather small.

I recalled you ToyFare people mentioning something about linebacker shoulder pads. My Loki was without these features! And instead of the big cape and big shoulder pads, I had nothing but some crappy piece of plastic extending from the top of his head!

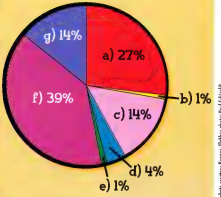
Survey Says...

TOYFARE'S AOL POLL

Folks buy action figures for lots of reasons—mainly to play with or collect or both. But how exactly do y'all decide WHICH figures to buy? After all, there's so dang many choices nowadays. What actually gets a toy-lover to pick up an action figure, take it up to the cashier and buy it? Other'n profiteering, we mean. We asked our America Online readers (and those nifty folks on our Wizard Emailer) for their collective insight.

WHAT MOST INSPIRES YOU TO BUY AN ACTION FIGURE?

a) Sculpting
b) Action feature
c) Paint deco
d) Scale
e) Accessories
f) Character
g) Other (be specific!)



Well, we got some obvious losers this time 'round, that's for sure. Action features and accessories don't seem to matter a whit to our ToyFare readers; at least they're hardly ever the most important thing. Instead, having a good sculpt—of a cool character—seems to be the winning combination.

Of course, not everyone felt the same way. One reader voted for scale, commenting: "There's nothing better than a huge chunk of Hulk or Apocalypse on your desk!" We'll take your word for it, buddy. Another die-hard toy freak insisted, "I buy toys because they say 'Star Wars' on the package..'nuff said." Gotcha. ●

HEY! more reader mail...

What's going on here? I've looked high and low for the figure you depicted in your magazine, and have come up empty-handed. I looked in your price guide and it said nothing about a variant figure. I want answers! Where can I get the Loki you guys have? I was so hoping that I wouldn't have to get any variants, but as a die-hard collector, I must.

Brian Rubin
bpr1124@yahoo.com

Sorry, Brian! The Loki photo we printed was of the prototype. Somewhere between the sculpting phase and the first production run, Toy Biz tweaked its Loki a bit. Well, more than a bit, actually. But rest assured, there's only one version of the ol' Lokester.

Dear ToyFare,

Hey, check it out! Before presidential plaything Monica Lewinsky fell into the media spotlight, she apparently posed for Kenner's Star Wars: POTF Lyn Me figure!

Nicole Parker
Chaska, MN

Hey, you could be onto something! I like this game! Let me see if I can think of any...

Loaned by and Custom photos courtesy JOYMAN World Photo. Lyn Me John courtesy Kenner. Hollow plastic Pez! Schmidt

Hmm. Maybe I'm not so good at this.

Dear ToyFare,

In the new Batman Movie Collection Batman vs. The Joker two-pack from Kenner, what's that little bat-shaped thing that comes with Batman? I first thought it was a batarang, but it has these little loops under it. Please help me, it's driving me nuts!

Sam Seivers
SSeivers@aol.com

Bet we can tell, those are the handcuffs originally packaged with Shadow Wing Batman in Kenner's Dark Knight Collection back in 1990.

Dear ToyFare,

I was interested to see the team photograph of the Invaders on the Union Jack action figure offer envelope included a Toro action figure. Have I missed something, or was that just a disguised Human Torch? And most importantly, when can we expect Bucky?

Laurence Smith
Crowborough,
United Kingdom

Yeah, that was just us being cute. There's never been a Toro action figure—we used a Human Torch I. Bucky, on the other hand, just might show up in Toy Biz's Captain America line this year, since we hear he's in the animated series. You can't keep a good sidekick down!

Dear ToyFare,

I would like to tear your "Website of the Month" column in ToyFare #7 a new one. Nothing personal, but starwars.hasbro.com really gets my goat. Here's where you went wrong:

1) It's accurate, yes. But up-to-date? About as up-to-date as voting for Spiro Agnew in 2000.

2) "See previews of the latest stuff," you write. See text about what quarter they're coming out, maybe.

3) "Putting rumors to rest." They quell rumors once every three to four months, and then usually only one crappy rumor (i.e. no gray pants Rebel Fleet Trooper). Assortment info is a joke, but that's Kenner's way.

4) One Internet exclusive a year is woefully few, and can be purchased after-market just about anywhere, for only a few bucks more than the cost of the figure.

Dear ToyFare,

In Marvel's "Age of Apocalypse" story, Rogue was married to Magneto and they had a son. But in Toy Biz's Famous Couples two-pack, Rogue is with Gambit. Does this make Gambit a homewrecker?

That so sad. Zach heart broken once. Zach had friend named Sniffy. Sniffy the bunny. Sniffy live in hole in backyard. Zach wish he live in hole! Fun fun! That beside point. Zach and Sniffy play every day. Sniffy fun friend! Sniffy bounce and jump and run with Zach. Zach love Sniffy. One day Sniffy bounce in front of Jeep. Crunch. Sniffy best friend! Best friend flat. Zach sad. Zach sad and hungry. Zach mostly hungry. Zach eat flat Sniffy. Zach feel guilty. But full.

6) "It's neato to visit the Web's touchstones," you write. This site is a spin-off of when they used to have all the Star Wars toy info on www.hasbrotoys.com. That site is a touchstone, but touching it gives me the willies. That site is out-of-date, scary to use and freaky to look at.

A really great, on the ball, up-to-the-minute Star Wars toy site is www.jedinet.com/sirsteve/. It's a great site, with daily updates of figures we aren't expecting for months, and they even popped up with pics of a couple figures Kenner didn't announce until weeks afterward (like Captain Piett).

Michael also included a note asserting that Hasbro's Star Wars site is NOT the most-visited toy site on the Web, as we assumed in that particular "Website of the Month." It's actually Ty's Beanie Babies site. Hey, no offense to the little pellet sacks.

Dear ToyFare,

I just read ToyFare #7 and was shocked when I saw that someone had the nerve to actually produce a series of Spice Girls dolls.

Spice Girls are nice to look at (especially on cold days), but leave it at that and let's get on with the real toys and not something I wouldn't add to my collection.

MINI-MALLRATS

To put it bluntly, they're the first "Clerks" toys.

As Graphitti Designs moves full speed ahead with its 8-inch Big Blast toy line, expect heroes of a different sort to join the lineup. Following quickly on the heels of its Grendel, Kevin Matchstick (Mage) and Madman figures, this September Graphitti Designs will add moviemaker/comic writer Kevin Smith's wildly popular characters Jay and Silent Bob (Smith's own onscreen alter-ego) to its stable of action figures.

From their humble beginnings as brain-dead, comic-loving, layabout drug dealers in Smith's first film, "Clerks," and subsequent appearances in "Mallrats" and "Chasing Amy," Jay and Silent Bob have enjoyed cult-fave status. They've been featured in movies, comic books (Oni Double Feature #1, as well as an upcoming Jay and Silent Bob mini-series), as well as 11 short films for MTV. When it came time to give them the action figure treatment, Smith turned to Grendel and Mage creator Matt Wagner for the designs. "I did the model sheets for them since I illustrated the Oni Double Feature story," Wagner said. "Believe me, these figures are going to be just as rude as that story was. They're really rude little toys, very in keeping with the characters."

Graphitti Designs' President Bob Chapman acknowledged that these action figures may not suit everyone's tastes, but he looks forward to capturing the same spirit of fun the characters always provide in their films. "These are going to have the same edge that the film characters have," Chapman said, citing accessories that include cigarettes, stash baggies and beer, not to mention a dog with an…attribute…that's so large it can't stand on all four legs. "They're not going to be entirely politically correct," Chapman said. "They're guaranteed to offend, but they're going to be funnier than hell. Still, we may have to get the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund helping us here!"

Currently on the fast track for release in September 1998, the Jay and Silent Bob figures, each sold separately, will sport some unique features. First off, Graphitti is experimenting with voice chips, so each character should hopefully be able to speak. According to Chapman, "Jay will say things like 'Snoochie Boochies' and 'Noonch!' [traditional exclamations from Smith's films], maybe five different things; Silent Bob tentatively will have a button on his back and say nothing at all. (Laughter) It'll be the Talking Silent Bob doll!" Graphitti also plans on making Jay's T-shirt designs variant-friendly. "We're going to have a variety of decals for the shirt," Chapman said, "one that says 'Chronic,' one that says 'All About the Clam,' and one with a marijuana leaf. We're trying to find the best way to do that so they're removable and interchangeable."

Each figure will also come with an interchangeable set of hands. Silent Bob's removable hand will hold two distinct types of cigarettes, one legal, one not, while Jay's hands will make a variety of gestures, from the mildly offensive to the profane. "When I first heard about that, I thought, 'This is great, an action figure that can flip you off!' Chapman laughed. "Maybe that's juvenile, but if so, I don't care. I love it."

Matt Wagner is very excited to see Jay and Silent Bob embraced by the public at large. "Kevin's really struck a neat balance with these characters," Wagner said. "They're such lovable rogues, you love to hate them and you hate to love them. They're very defiantly rude, yet the mainstream is willing to lay down its normal aversion to such stuff and really get a kick out of them."

In a recent Wizard: The Comics Magazine interview, Kevin Smith said, "As soon as they do the Jay and Silent Bob action figures, then I know I'm fulfilled, I've lived the ultimate fanboy's life. Once they make the action figures I can pretty much drop dead, it's all complete."

We're only guessing here, but it looks like, come September, Smith may want to recant that statement. ■ Scott Brick

OOLA-LA!

After the astounding success of its Cantina Band Member action figure exclusive, the Official Star Wars Fan Club is going back to the seemingly endless Star Wars well for its next exclusive Kenner offer, an Oola and Salacious Crumb Two-Pack.

"I'm particularly excited because I think it's one of the best sculpts I've seen for a Star Wars figure so far," said Jon Bradley Snyder, vice president of Fantastic Media and Star Wars Insider editor-in-chief. "The likeness in her face is just awesome and I love the gesture that [Kenner] did with Salacious Crumb. We feel really lucky to have this."

The two figures, offered for sale to Star Wars Fan Club members in May to ship by mid-summer, will be packaged in a four-color window box. The first-ever figure of the green-skinned dancer Oola will come with cloth leggings and a chain and collar, and, along with Jabba the Hutt's cackling court jester Salacious Crumb, should retail for $12 plus postage and handling. Orders from the general public will be taken in July.

Since the club previously offered the band member and a pop-up cardboard Cantina diorama, fans had speculated that the next fan club exclusive would be another lesser-known "Star Wars" alien, but Snyder decided to go in a different direction. "Everybody knows who Oola is," Snyder explained. "And since Salacious Crumb wasn't planned for any other playset, the two of them together seemed like a killer one-two punch."

But fans hoping to complete their collection of memorable "Star Wars" creatures shouldn't give up just yet. "Star Wars fans know that there are still a lot of aliens from the cantina that have yet to be made, so you never know…" Snyder teased.

If you're not a member of the Official Star Wars Fan Club, a six-issue subscription to the Star Wars Insider newsletter can be ordered for $19.95 by writing to the Star Wars Insider, P.O. Box 111000, Aurora, CO 80042, or by calling 1-800-TRUE-FAN for credit card rders. ■ Tom Palmer Jr.

MAPLE LEAF MUTIES, EH?

X-Men collectors better make room on their toy shelves…'cause Alpha Flight is on the way!

The original Canadian superhero team will get the action figure treatment in 1999 thanks to Toy Biz. Shipping in three packages, the Alpha Flight action figures will feature members of the team of mutants from the Great White North which debuted in Uncanny X-Men #129.

So how'd Toy Biz pick the figures for the assortment? "We polled the fans on the Internet as to which team they'd like to see, the classic team or the revamped team that has the [Alpha Flight] book now," Toy Biz's Marketing Manager Matt Keller said. "The classic team won by a landslide, and of them, the original members won hands down."

Production of the Alpha Flight figures will be under the careful eye of Damon Nee, product manager at Toy Biz and a huge Alpha Flight fan. "I went home and dug out all my issues of the original series for reference art. We'll be using [creator] John Byrne's versions of the characters," Nee said happily.

So who made the cut? Toy Biz's Alpha Flight plans pan out in the form of two two-packs and one single-packaged character: Snowbird and Puck (packaged together), Aurora and Northstar (also twin-packed), and Sasquatch.

Savvy Alpha Flighters will notice one conspicuous absence in the lineup, team leader Guardian. "We'd just done a Guardian exclusive with ToyFare, so we really didn't see the point in tooling up a whole new figure," Keller said. "We really want to get new figures out to collectors, one that they haven't had a chance to get otherwise."

And as for more Alpha Flight figures possibly including such figures as the Master, Gilded Lily and Box, neither Nee nor Keller discounted the idea, but took the cautious route. "Let's see how these guys do first," Keller said. "Once these figures come out we can see the reaction to them, and go from there. Alpha Flight is a team that has been around for years, and still has a tremendous fan following and trust me, fans are going to love these figures." ■ Matthew Brady

I THINK I'M A CLONE NOW

She's bad, she's mad and she's got a whole new 'do.

Tiffany, the angelic Spawn hunter, not the '80s one-hit wonder, will be coming out with a new look and head sculpt as an exclusive for McFarlane Toys Collector's Club members.

This new Tiffany will be more in line with the comic version that's appeared in Todd McFarlane's Spawn. "She'll have her costume from the comic, a necroplasm-coated weapon, a changed belt and a different gun," McFarlane Toys' Chet Jacques said. "Also, since she'll be exclusive to the Club, we can do stuff that retail stores deemed a little too sexy, so this Tiffany will have a bare midriff with her belly button showing."

Topping off the exclusive Tiffany will be, naturally, her new hair. "Tiffany's hair will be sculpted. Not fake hair plugs this time around," Jacques said. "This hair matches her comic [version] a lot closer than the previous Tiffany's did."

McFarlane's new Tiffany is mad as hell and she's not gonna take it anymore!

While all the attention over Tiffany makes more than a few collectors ask, "Where's Angela?" Jacques assured fans not to worry about that other Spawn hunter, already an action figure favorite from McFarlane Toys. "Tiffany's not eclipsing Angela in terms of popularity, but she is one of the comics' major players," Jacques said. "People love Angela, and she'll always have a place in our hearts, but we've seen a lot of Angela in the last few years. Tiffany has more of a '90s attitude. She doesn't take any crap from anyone."

Jacques revealed that the new Tiffany is only the beginning for McFarlane Toys Collector's Club exclusives. "This is the first resculpt," Jacques explained. "We've done repaints until now, but we're going to start doing more resculpts in the future. It's a natural move for us. We're starting to do more resculpts as store exclusives, so why should we treat the Club any differently? Tiffany's just the first."

Collectors interested in joining the McFarlane Toys Collector's Club can either call 1-888-99-SPAWN or visit the official Spawn website at www.spawn.com. ■ Matthew Brady

PATRIOT DAMES

Guess who?

American Woman, that's who!

Hitting shelves in June alongside her Antarctic Press comic title of the same name, American Woman will debut in action figure form a month later. And according to creator Brian Denham, who was given the opportunity to design the action figure spawned from his comic, American Woman has been a dream come true.

"It's pretty cool," he said. "When the prototype came in I sat around the office and stared at that thing for about four hours. I was getting on everyone's nerves!"

Once the regular Warrior Nun Areala artist, Denham, who has also worked with Marvel Comics and publisher Rob Liefeld, was an action figure novice. For his first attempt, he kept his American Woman design simple. But he was encouraged to try again, and really go wild. "They told me, 'This might be the one time in your life you'll get to make an action figure,'" Denham said. On a deadline, he took it home and worked overnight to add every little detail he could imagine. The result was a figure with finely sculpted laces, scratches, tears and dings…and Denham couldn't be happier with the result.

Denham describes the character as something of a "female Thor." One of his goals was to create a powerful female character in the "good girl" vein, a response to the deluge of "bad girl" books lining comic racks over the past several years.

American Woman, a.k.a. fashion designer Victoria Strauss, is the latest in a long line of American Women—defenders of freedom dating back to the Revolutionary War. Granted superpowers by the "Spirit of America"—in other words, the patriotism of the American people—Strauss appears when she is most needed to protect her native land. When the people rally behind her, she's nigh unstoppable. But when the public loses faith in her, she's powerless.

The first issue sees American Woman tackle a gigantic dragon from an interdimensional rift in New York City, a battle in which the Brooklyn Bridge gets crushed.

"I was tired of the bad girl books," Denham said. "I wanted a book that girls could get into, too."

If all goes as planned, girls and boys will be picking up the American Woman action figure—and comic book—come summer. ■ Tom Root

KISS OF THE SPIDERWOMAN

She ain't no ordinary web-head.

Bolt Entertainment's femme fatale Webwitch is all set to ensnare action figure collectors. Based on the comic book series by Raff Ienco, Webwitch's story began thousands of years ago, when members of the mysterious arachnid Spidernation fell into a deep sleep in the Arctic, remaining there until explorer Nina Hoffman journeyed too close and was possessed by the Queen Mother. Now, as the beautiful-but-deadly Webwitch, Nina travels the world searching for a male host so that the hive might one day escape from its cold prison and dominate the warm world of man.

"Webwitch was a figure that was just begging to be made," said Bolt Entertainment's Kevin Alsop. "We really liked her look—she's a mix of blues and greens, and is just one of the most unique figures out there."

Coming in at 7 inches tall, Webwitch has nine points of articulation and arrives with wrist blades as well as a detailed base, reminiscent of the Spidernation hive. Removable neural tubes connect Webwitch to her base.

As with all Bolt toys, Webwitch's manufacturing run will be limited to 20,000 figures, with one out of every six a alternate "blue costume" variant. Additionally, a limited run of 6,000 gold variants will be available as well.

It comes as no surprise to Alsop that a majority of toy collectors have never heard of Webwitch. Bolt Entertainment, which is associated with fellow comics publisher Avatar Press, is in the practice of making figures of lesser-known characters. "We have a large character [stable]," Alsop said. "We look at our characters and pick potential figures on the basis of who would make a cool action figure, not necessarily book sales. So even though not many people may know about the Webwitch comic—which is a great book—we'll still make the figure. Which means plenty more Bolt figures will be coming to stores."

TOYFARE TAKES A GANDER AT THE HOTTEST NEW RELEASES

KABOOM!

Awesome's new Kaboom! action figure is da bomb...literally.

Kaboom!, the new action figure based on Jeff Matsuda and Jeph Loeb's manga-influenced comic book series, will be exploding into comic shops this August. Originally commissioned to heighten fans' awareness of their newest comic book and to promote the next Kaboom! miniseries, Awesome Entertainment actually got more than it bargained for—according to president Rob Liefeld, Awesome succeeded in creating what they believe will be one of the hottest toys around.

"In general, I think action figures are as powerful a marketing tool for your concept as anything that's out there," Liefeld says. "But this one in particular...I tell you, this toy is just cool! I don't know another toy like it available on the market. It rocks!"

In a nutshell, Kaboom! is a 16-year-old kid named Geof Sunrise whose world gets turned upside-down (Hah! You thought we'd say 'goes Kaboom!', didn't ya?) when a mysterious figure named Zang offers him "The Pair," two oversized (and we mean HUGE) mitts that tap into the Kaboom Cycle, a tremendous source of power that allow Geof to pretty much do whatever he wants, including coming back from the dead.

The Kaboom! comic book has a unique, exaggerated artistic style, similar to Japanese manga and anime, where everything looks far bigger than it should in real life. Take the mitts, for instance: in the comic, those gloves look almost as big as Geof's whole body. So how 'bout in real life? "On this toy the mitts are so big, it's like getting three action figures," Liefeld says. "We were going to do two of Kaboom!'s villains, Limp and Lump. They were going to be really small accessories to the figure, but the gloves turned out bigger than Limp and Lump were going to be. These gloves are so big that if your hands are small enough, you can wear them."

Liefeld is particularly proud of how faithful the toy is to Matsuda's source material. "Jeff's style is so much more personal and identifiable that anyone else's," Liefeld enthuses. "He did a series of sketches that was handed to the sculptor who did just a bang-up job. I think this is the best toy we've done. The arms, the elbows and the shape are very faithful to Matsuda's stuff and are very stylistic. For the crowd that craves those great manga-style, Japanese animation toys, this is even better."

There will be three different versions of the figure, each dictated by the comic itself. Y'see, Kaboom!'s costume, an ectoplasmic "skin" generated by the mitts, lends itself to different color schemes. "In the comic, when he uses the power, he changes color, so there will probably be a blue variant with blue skin tones," Liefeld says. "Those are the kinds of variants I like, the ones that are dictated by the comics themselves. I think they're received stronger. The Kaboom! variants will absolutely reflect him using his powers."

Similar to Awesome's other action figures to date, including the Fighting American and Genie, the Kaboom! figure has only five points of articulation, but according to Liefeld, that's not a handicap. "[It's] what I call the admiration factor of the toy," Liefeld says. "For our marketplace, it's the most important thing we can be doing. You take it out, admire the artistry and sculpting, interact with it, and that's what it's all about. If you capture the pose, the attitude of the character, then that's the key. Kaboom! is in a great stance that can be manipulated with the five points, and I find that with most people that's the important level of satisfaction."

So if you're into toys with attitude and an admiration factor, Kaboom! may be one action figure you should definitely pick up. After all, if what Awesome claims is true, it's gonna make the entire toy industry go...well, you know. TF

WHO'S IN THE ASSORTMENT?
For right now, just Kaboom!, but look for various villains to show up before Christmas.

WHEN?
August 1998, in conjunction with the new Kaboom! miniseries.

WHAT'S THE DEAL?
Based upon the recent Kaboom! miniseries from Awesome, this figure's a faithful rendition of the manga-styled hero. Kaboom!'s gloves are the two main accessories, if you can call them that. They're so huge, it's almost like getting three toys in one...!

By Scott Brick

Scott Brick wonders if that old saying about the size of a man's hands applies to Kaboom!

When it's all said and done, Awesome's Kaboom! figure will sport "The Pair," powered gloves almost as big as our hero (see insets for a look at the design sketches).

TOYFARE TAKES A GANDER AT THE HOTTEST NEW RELEA

STARGODS: RA

Here comes the sun god.

Antarctic Press, the folks who brought toy collectors the Warrior Nun Areala and Usagi Yojimbo action figures, are set to introduce the first entry in their latest toy line: Stargods: Ra, based on Conquest Studios' upcoming comic book release blending computer imagery and fully painted art. Created by comics pencilers Dean Zachary [Hawk & Dove] and Scott Clark [Alpha Flight], Stargods is set to debut simultaneously as both a comic book, CD-ROM and action figure line this July.

Led by the Egyptian sun god Ra, the Stargods team includes Athena, Mars and Thor, plus a few other stellar gods taken from Earth's numerous pantheons, including Egyptian, Greco-Roman, Norse and Japanese beliefs. But y'see, we only think they're gods. Set in the present day, this feuding alien society of godlike creatures has visited Earth a number of times over the eons, inspiring the various mythologies that have sprouted on our planet. Despite being constantly at one another's throats, these deities ultimately team up to defend themselves against Anachron, an intergalactic menace based upon the Master of the Hunt. They come to Earth in order to gain help from Jason, Hercules and several other Earth-bound heroes in their fight against evil. So essentially it's a new superhero team, but the catch is you have to be a god to join.

And there you have it. Lots of gods, lots of diverse mythologies, and most importantly, lots of fodder for great toys, all with an interstellar appeal.

Given that the sun god Ra's supposed to be pretty omnipotent as far as deities go, he was the natural choice to lead the team, as well as to initiate the toy line. "Ra is a tremendously powerful figure in [Egyptian] mythology" Clark says. "He's also got a great look, though he's a little different here; our look has him in bio-armor. We're trying to keep things pretty close to the mythologies, but when you turn them into superheroes, it's a bit different. We're just exaggerating everything that we've read about the characters, just like you would with any comic book."

One way Antarctic has maintained the traditional look is by giving Ra a massive set of wings—probably the largest to ever grace an action figure. "In the 'real' mythology, [Ra's] wings are his main weapon for hand-to-hand combat" Clark says, "so on the action figure, we've tried to do something that's never been done. He's 7 inches high, but his wingspan is 26 inches and fully moveable. They swing back and fold up. He's really quite imposing."

With a wingspan nearly four times the figure's height, imposing is a good word for it. Antarctic Press Vice President Joe Dunn is very excited to see the fans' reaction to the wings. "The sculpting turned

For right now, just Ra, but given the amount of star-faring gods out there, look for more figures every few months.

WHEN?

Ra blasts his way into your toy collection in September 1998.

WHAT'S THE DEAL?

Based on Conquest Studios' upcoming comic release through Antarctic Press, Ra is the leader of the Stargods, a brand new super-team made up of a bunche starfaring gods from various Earth mythologies. Nothing in the way of accessories, but this 7-inch figure, complete with bio-armor, has a wingspan nearly four times its height!

out great," Dunn says. "These wings are going to make it a really nice figure. I'm very excited about it. We're really trying to show that we're capable of doing toys that are every bit as detailed as McFarlane Toys, and when people see the wings on Ra, I think they'll have to agree we're definitely up to it."

All in all, there are going to be 19 points of articulation on Ra. As Clark enthuses, "This one's a mega-deluxe-premium action figure in every way!"

So with an initial release like Ra, what do these guys plan to do for an encore? "Well, we're going to try to come out with new toys every few months," Clark says. "After all, there are a lot more Stargods. It's a neat project. We're actually going to try to keep making each new figure better than the last." TF

Getting personal with Toy Biz's best-kept secret

By Matthew Brady

In the multi-billion dollar world of boys toys, his is the ultimate Cinderella story.

Here's the fairy tale version: For years, Phil Ramirez worked as an hourly scrub in a sculpting studio. One day, his bosses asked if he wanted to take a shot at sculpting an action figure. Figuring he had nothing to lose, Ramirez gave it a shot. Once the final touches were applied, Ramirez presented the sculpt to his bosses, and jaws dropped in amazement. And his first work landed him a solid job as one of the industry's premier figure sculptors.

Welcome to the world of übersculptor Phil Ramirez.

Never heard of him? A trip to any toy store should reveal a small portion of Ramirez's extensive résumé. Since his dynamic entrance into the world of action figures six years ago, Ramirez has sculpted toys from such diverse franchises as Beauty and the Beast for McDonald's Happy Meals to Spawn II, WildC.A.T.s and Youngblood, along with a few Star TreK icons, too. But Ramirez is probably best known in the industry for his dead-on uncanny likenesses of the X-Men for Toy Biz, as well as the Hulk...and Spider-Man. Lara Croft? Been there, done that. These days, he's busy as can be. Knee-deep in maggots sculpting Toy Biz's Resident Evil nasties and even finding time to recreate the monster that ate Japan, Godzilla.

How's he do it? That's what ToyFare aimed to find it...so we tracked Ramirez to his California studio, complete with a stuffed cat for inspiration, and begged him to reveal the secret to action figure success.

In Toy Biz's Marvel Universe, sculptor Phil Ramirez is a giant, towering over a few of his creations in his Arcadia, Calif., studio.

TOYFARE. Okay, Phil, we've heard the legends. How did you really get your start sculpting?

RAMIREZ. It was pure luck. Absolute pure luck. I was working at Varner Studios, which does a lot of the Star Trek toys for Playmates. I used to clean and pour hard copies, the polyurethane prototypes, along with a little painting. One day, they let me try sculpting, and I did all right, so they had me continue. It was absolute luck. It's something I still have trouble believing.

Is sculpting action figures something that you pictured yourself doing when you were a kid?

Not in a million years. I always loved toys as a kid, but as a kid I didn't even know this profession existed. I just figured that some magical entity dropped toys from the sky, and they ended up in my lap. I'm the luckiest guy around as far as I'm concerned.

What were your favorite toys as a kid?

I liked He-Man and the Shogun Warriors a lot…and any kind of monster. I never bought the human characters; I'd just go and pick through toy lines until I found the monsters. In fact, the two all-time greatest toys ever made in my mind were two monsters: S-S-Slithe from the Thundercats line, and the original Hammerhead from [Kenner's] Star Wars. They were just the greatest things ever done.

Once you got your start in sculpting at Varner, how long did it take for your work to get noticed?

I worked at Varner beginning when I was 18, and started sculpting around age 19. I did a lot of stuff there, but I was too young, and never really took the job very seriously. So for about three years, I did basically nothing with my sculpting—I was just too busy hanging out and having a good time. Then Varner got [Playmates'] WildC.A.T.s line, which was my first opportunity to sculpt really cool superhero stuff. I got to do most of the rough clays for that line, and that got me more interested in sculpting figures as a real job. WildC.A.T.s came out pretty well, and Todd [McFarlane] liked the look, so I left Varner and went freelance for McFarlane Toys. Immediately after working for McFarlane, I started freelancing for Toy Biz, and have been working for them ever since. They keep me pretty busy.

What was first complete figure you sculpted?

Start to finish, it was the Daemonite from WildC.A.T.s.

Tell us about your creative process. How do things work with Toy Biz?

For a guy with just two hands, Ramirez's creature sculpts, including Sugar Man, Daemonite and Man-Lizard more than make up for it.

Creature Comforts

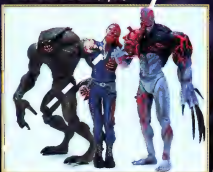
With nearly 70 figures on his résumé to date, you'd think a guy like Phil wouldn't play favorites. Wrong. Sometimes a creation just has a special place in its creator's heart (just ask Dr. Frankenstein). Being a good creator, Phil has a few favorites that he's sculpted over the years. The Mummified cat (at left), however, is real.

Resident Evil (Toy Biz)



"It's one of my all-time favorites of mine, because I got to do most of that line. I did everything except for the bodies on Jill, Chris and the doctor zombie. And of course, I did all the monsters, which was a lot of fun."

I've worked with Toy Biz long enough that we have a really good understanding of each other. They'll call me and ask what characters I really want to do and tell me what characters they'd like to do, and we go from there. Next, they'll send me control art, which I use just for figuring out articulation points. For the actual sculpting, I find references everywhere, from comic books to animation to videos. Anything, really. For a specific figure, I'll try to find an artist that I like and use his stuff as [reference] and then sculpt out from there, [adding] all the extras I can, like small details and facial expressions.

Who are some of the comic book artists you've used for reference?

For [Toy Biz's] Spider-Man villains, I used a lot of Erik Larsen's stuff, along with some of Art Adams' work. I've also used Joe Madureira and done a few things in his style. His art is really cool, and has a nice mix of Japanese and American influences that translate really well as figures.

So once you've got the inspiration, what's your actual sculpting process like?

Like all figure-making, I start off with the armature—the plastic joints that you have to make or rip out of existing figures. From there, I wire all the joints together to form a skeleton in the rough pose that I want. Then, I use a hybrid of clay and wax, and just begin sculpting from there. While I'm sculpting, I listen to a lot of music and watch a lot of videos.

So are you pulling a Mozart here, using something to distract part of your mind so it frees the other part up to sculpt uninhibited?

Yeah, that makes it sound good [Laughs]. You have to keep yourself busy and look at something, otherwise, your mind will wander as you sculpt, and that will come out in your work. I know it sounds weird, but you need all kinds of stimuli to keep yourself grounded and focused on the work. For music, it's the Residents, Pussy Galore, every punk band you can imagine and some hardcore rap. Mostly, I like punk. That's what I've been listening to since I was 13. As far as movies go, you name it. The worse the movie, the better the chance I've watched it while I'm sculpting. I love bad horror movies like "Blackenstein," "Dr. Black and Mr. Hyde"—those really horribly made '60s and '70s [cult-favorite] movies.

What do you see as the overall theme of your work?

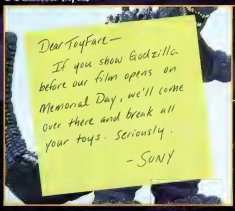
I'm supposed to have a theme? [Laughs] Well, it really depends on who the character is. I try to make a good guy look powerful and good…and make a bad guy look powerful and bad. It really just depends on the character. You just take each, read about who they are, and you try to put a personality to it and just go with it. Hopefully, it looks all right when you're done.

From your viewpoint, is Toy Biz moving toward cooler figures?

I think so, yeah. Some of the earlier Toy Biz sculpts were fairly static. Just recently, I had to get some references and went and found old Toy Biz catalogs. You could easily see that the figures just didn't have the energy that the ones today have. Toy Biz has some really good product managers who encourage [freelancers] to go as far as we can with our designs, and luckily, I've been able to keep up. I've always wanted to go all the way with my sculptures, and make them mine by giving them tons of detail and doing more to them. Before, you had to stick to control art quite a bit. As I've worked more with these guys, they've really let me go and explore what I can do, concept-wise.

Speaking of making figures "yours," what are your signature designs on a figure?

Godzilla (Toy Biz)



Dear Toyfare—
If you show Godzilla before our film opens on Memorial Day, we'll come over there and break all your toys. Seriously.

"I got to work from Art Adams artwork on The Absorbing Man. And I also got to go art on my own and pose, texture and paint him all by myself. I was really happy with how he turned out."

The faces. I try to put a lot of expression in my faces. I do anatomy a little bit differently, too, but I'd say that you can always tell my stuff by the faces. For example, I like to think that my sculpts for the Bride of Venom, Absorbing Man, Rhino and the Secret Weapons Beast all have real expressions on their faces that set them apart from other figures out there and hopefully give them distinct personalities.

Do you think today's dynamic, personality-filled sculpts are a trend kick-started by McFarlane Toys?

While I give Todd [McFarlane] credit for starting his own toy company, a huge amount of credit should go to Eric Treadaway, his sculptor. He is THE MAN as far as I'm concerned.

When he started at McFarlane Toys, he had no background in action figures, and he came in and over-detailed everything. In the beginning, I was always told that you couldn't use much detail because it wouldn't show up on the finished figure. You had to make everything really smooth and flat. Eric didn't do that. I don't think he was even aware of the old conventions. Because of the amount of detail in his work, toys have gotten better. Eric's work set a standard that everyone now works toward.

So along with Eric Treadaway, whose work do you personally look to for inspiration?

In terms of art, my biggest classical influences are Michaelangelo, Rodan and Donatello. In terms of guys who are still around today, I think Ken Milton and Robert Williams are just incredible, along with Robert Crumb. Plus, there're a lot of guys who are my age now, [and] I'm really looking forward to their stuff as they get older and their art becomes more refined. The Shiflett Brothers are awesome, also Eric, [Art Asylum's] Digger Mensch, and Cleet Moffett whose work is not generally known, are really great. And of course, with figure sculpting, you just can't beat Clayburn Moore.

What characters would you love to sculpt into action figures?

I'd love to do a Darkstalkers line, based on the Capcom video game. It has all the movie monsters in it, drawn in that Capcom "manga" style. That would be a lot of fun. In terms of a singular Marvel Comics character, I want to sculpt the Toad. He's one of my all-time favorite characters. He'd stand in either a standing or crouched position, maybe with a jump feature. I'd also like to take a shot at

The two faces of the Beast: Phil Ramirez has sculpted modern [left] and classic [right] versions of the Marvel Mutant, each with exacting attention to detail.

The Bride of Venom (Venom: Along Came a Spider)

"She was a really unconventional, strange character. I really got to let loose with her and just go a little crazy in terms of design and pose. I think she ended up looking really weird and messed up, which is just what I was going for."

"He was a weird little guy who was a lot of fun to sculpt. And of course, since I love putting expressions on my figures, I had twice as much to work with."

either Arcade or do a really good version of the Thing.

Having worked from nearly every genre, from comics to animation to computer games, what's your favorite source material?

I like them all, but from a practical side, I really like doing the animated stuff, because it's such a quick turnaround. I can do those pieces really fast. I recently sculpted Eric Cartman [from "South Park"] for fun. Overall, I like everything pretty much equally. Whatever I'm working on at the moment, I really get into.

Is it the coolest thing in the world to walk into a Toys R Us and see your work lined up all over Aisle 7?

Actually, whenever I go into toy stores, my ego is shattered. I can always guarantee that some 27-year-old guy will be pointing out how badly my figures suck to his wife or friend. I really don't want to have anybody come up to me and tell me to my face that my stuff sucks, but overhearing it really helps keep your ego in check. There's no room for ego in this business.

Last question, Phil. Where do you see yourself in five years? Will you still be making toys, or will you move on to other arenas?

I'd like to be doing design and maquette work for film. I do some stop-motion animation for fun, and it would be nice to get into something like that. But that's really not all too feasible since there are a bunch of really good animators out there that I just couldn't compete with. I've done a few test movies, and it's a lot of really hard work to do it right. I don't know where I'll be. I hope to do something somewhat meaningful. We'll just have to wait and see. TF

In his youth, freelance writer Matthew Brady tried his hand at sculpting Spam.

Zombie 101

Where do you go for reference when you're charged with sculpting the most horrific action figures ever? That's the quandary Ramirez was faced with when he landed the sculpting gig for Toy Biz's Resident Evil line, based on the best-selling Capcom video game where decaying zombies and exploding dogs were the rule.

"I've seen so many bad things that a lot of it was straight off the top of my head," Ramirez chuckles madly. "We also had a lot of dermatology books which showed what certain nasty skin conditions look like up close. And of course, we rented all the zombie films we could get."

For the skinned dog, Cerberus, Ramirez didn't have to look much farther than his own studio. "I actually have a mummified cat named Fluffy on my wall that helped out with Cerberus," Ramirez says. "Basically, I guess it came down to us referencing everything we could think of. While we ended up using a lot of medical texts, Capcom's original concept drawings were excellent. For a lot of the designing, I just followed these, and they translated into figures really well."

While Ramirez made the monsters as high on the creep-o-meter as he could, he had to tone things down a little for Chris and Jill, the human investigators who fight all the nasties. "The humans in the line are a little more cartoony in appearance," Ramirez says. "That's just thanks to the way they were designed in the game, so they wouldn't be confused with the monsters."

But for the really nasty stuff, Ramirez notes that a good sculptor...uh...improvises. "When it was all said and done, I used whatever I could get a hold of," Ramirez says. "It was usually legal, but sometimes...well, you just gotta use what you gotta use."

Ever and Hemingway (Unproduced Generation X)

"It's a real shame that they'll never be made. Sculpting them both was a lot of fun. They're just big, heavily detailed monsters. It's a great shame that they'll never be made and no one will ever be able to buy them."

TOY STORY

A LOOK AT ACTION FIGURES FROM YEARS PAST

SUPER POWERS

Once upon a time...

...Wonder Woman, Captain Marvel, Firestorm, Dr. Fate and the Red Tornado resided in toy store aisles alongside Batman, Robin and Superman. Heck, even characters like Plastic Man, Cyborg and the New Gods got the plastic treatment.

No, really.

This isn't some "Elseworlds" fantasy. And it sure ain't no Earth-2 tale.

We're talking about Kenner's Super Powers action figures, one of the best superhero action figure lines to ever come down the pike, and arguably including the finest renditions of DC Comics characters ever.

It's hard to say now how many companies were competing for the right to produce DC figures in 1984. Certainly Mattel was interested; according to Mattel senior product manager Martin Arriola, the Marvel Secret Wars figure line was their second choice after discovering that Kenner, riding high on the success of the Star Wars movies, had already locked up the DC universe.

Joey Cavalieri, now group editor of the Superman comic book titles for DC Comics, was part of the group that reviewed Kenner's work on the action figure versions of the DC characters. He recalls that there were two important issues when it came to selecting which heroes would make the cut. "The popularity of the characters was paramount," Cavalieri remembers. "It was also very important that there be some kind of [action] function." This took the form of a different "super power" action feature for each figure, hence the name of the line. Red Tornado's legs spun when kids squeezed his arms, Wonder Woman had her custom "bracelet block" when you squeezed her legs, and so on...

To its credit, Super Powers had the added advantage of having not one, but two mass media tie-ins. The "Super Friends" cartoon, which began airing in 1973, had aired only reruns since 1980. In 1984, the series underwent a name change as a new season debuted, and became "Super Friends: The Legendary Super Powers Show." Jack Kirby's Fourth World nemesis Darkseid and his elite were the chief villains. The same went for the three Super Powers comic book mini-series, two of which were drawn by the great Kirby himself. The stories were not considered part of DC continuity, but featured the characters from the Super Powers line, as well as various vehicles and playsets—an ideal marketer for the toys nonetheless.

The first wave of action figures included nearly all of the heavy hitters in DC's stable: Superman, Batman, Wonder Woman, Green Lantern, the Flash and more...plus the usual supervillains. Based on market research, "Kenner was banking on the Flash being the most popular of the bunch, almost eclipsing Superman," Cavalieri says, "which I think was one of the reasons you could find [him] just about anywhere."

The second wave featured the villains of Jack Kirby's Fourth

Kenner's Super Powers toys had the perfect marketing vehicle in ABC's animated "Super Friends."

World, who were prominent characters in the comics and cartoons, and second-tier heroes like Green Arrow, Red Tornado and Firestorm. There were also two mail-in offers, one for Superman's alter-ego Clark Kent (for series one) and one for Darkseid's uncle, the warrior Steppenwolf (series two), and several vehicles that also were featured prominently in both the comic book and animated series.

The third, and unfortunately final, wave focused on characters like Mister Miracle, Plastic Man and Captain Marvel (called Shazam! on his blister card for legal reasons), heroes out of the limelight but tailor-made for action figures. This wave also included two new figures that had not appeared in either the cartoon or the comics—Golden Pharaoh and Cyclotron—as well as a toy version of Samurai, who had appeared only in the "Super Friends" animated universe. "[Kenner] had some ideas for figures that they had pitched to us, and we didn't have anything analogous in the character library," says Cavalieri of the trio.

By the time the third wave was released, interest was dying, sales were dropping, and Super Powers was canceled. It was a triple whammy that ended the figures, the comics and the cartoon in 1986. Collectors have speculated about a planned fourth wave of Super Powers figures ever since. Rumors suggest that Blue Beetle, Booster Gold, Man-Bat and Batgirl were among the figures due for release in 1987. Certainly, the Tower of Doom, a Darkseid-themed playset, was in the works; it was pictured on card backs during wave three, although it was never released.

It took a few more years for Super Powers to truly end, however. Some of the original toy molds were purchased by Pacipa, a South American toy company, and these figures were manufactured as Super Amigos in 1989. The production quality was lower than their North American counterparts, resulting in cheaper plastics and inferior paint decos. The line, however, included two new figures: the Riddler (a redecoed Green Lantern) and the mysterious Captain Ray. A true oddity, Captain Ray was a repainted Superman and represents no known super hero from North or South America.

Two more sightings of the Super Powers molds capped the end of the figures. In 1989, the fledgling Toy Biz was awarded the DC license. Obtaining some of the Super Powers molds, Toy Biz used them in their "Batman" movie figures and in a subsequent DC Comics Super Heroes line. The production quality was poor, and the license was returned to Kenner the following year. In 1990, Kenner itself reused some of the Super Powers molds for its Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves collection. The Kenner Robin Hood figure was merely Green Arrow with a Kevin Costner head—Green Arrow's "G" belt buckle remained.

Kenner has since been very successful with the DC license, albeit more focused, and has gone on to make fantastic figures for the Batman and Superman animated series. An attempt was made to cover other DC heroes in the recently defunct Batman: Total Justice line, which featured beautifully sculpted figures. The toys lacked both articulation and the almighty animated tie-in, which may have spelled doom for the line in today's discriminating toy marketplace. Although Kenner has no plans to resurrect Super Powers, they continue to sneak other DC heroes into their Batman animated series, including the Creeper, while the Superman animated line, which would have included Supergirl and Metallo, has been put on hiatus domestically pending the next "Superman" feature film.

A toy collector himself, Cavalieri has a warm spot in his heart for Super Powers. "[Kenner] couldn't have been more faithful to the characters. They were a joy to look at," he says. "They had the best sculptors in the world doing these things. There were a million ways it could have gone wrong, but it didn't. They were dead-on accurate, unbelievably faithful."

All of which goes a long way toward explaining why Kenner is still producing DC Comics figures in some form or another 14 years later. TF

HOMEMADE HEROES

THANKS TO HASBRO!

A PLATOON OF HOMEMADE G.I. JOE ACTION FIGURES

ATTEN-SHUN! All you scrawny-lookin' grunts did your country proud by militarizing your action figures and entering the "G.I. Joe Homemade Heroes" contest from ToyFare #7, so we've decided to show off the best of the best and put 'em on display for everybody to see.

The few…the proud…the winners this month receive a figure from Hasbro's 1997 G.I. Joe Modern Forces assortment, while one lucky grand prize-winning grunt walks away with all seven Modern Forces figures, including the ultra-rare G.I. Jane!

CHEWIE JOE & G.I. LADY DEATH [TOP, CENTER]

Jamie Hazel, San Juan, Puerto Rico

Nobody puts up a fight better'n a pissed-off Wookiee and a busty bad girl! Chewbacca here was merely one of Kenner's new Star Wars Collector Series 12-inch figures, with some accessories provided by Hasbro's G.I. Joe figures. Lady Death was based on a Stacy Gymnast figure with the head from a Tenko doll and some strategically placed Super Sculpey for some of Lady Death's finer, ummm…features.

BACKLASH JOE [BOTTOM RIGHT]

Jay Borman, Columbus, Ohio

Who knows what Jay made this fatigue-wearin' version of Image Comics' Backlash from, since he forgot to include a list of materials. Far as we can tell, it's just a Hasbro G.I. Joe figure with a few careful paint changes. Whatever it is, this is still one cool-lookin' figure.

VIOLATOR JOE & G.I. GRENDEL [BOTTOM CENTER, LEFT]

Paul Chojnacki, Muskego, Wis.

While these two guys are the least likely subjects for a new crossover comic, they make for some damn fine homemade figures. Violator was originally a McFarlane Toys Super-Size Violator figure, with accessories from some Hasbro G.I. Joe figures. Underneath his costume, Grendel's really Lou Gehrig from Kenner's Starting Lineup Cooperstown Collection with a hand-sewn mask made from black fabric.

PREDATOR JOE

James R. Whiteside, Milford, Ohio

One thing's for sure: the U.S. Army would kick a whole lot more ass if it had more soldiers like this one. How'd James make this figure? Easy. Take the head and hands from Kenner's 10-inch Ultimate Predator the Alien Hunter figure and plop it onna Hasbro G.I. Joe body. Easy-Peasy.

GRAND PRIZE WINNER

FRANKENTROOPER, SUPER ACE, BAT COMMANDO & THE BART BRIGADE

Tim Faurote, Decatur, Ind.

No doubt about it, an undead soldier like Frankenstein would make for one tough-as-nails soldier that would be a monster on the battlefield.

That's probably why Tim decided to make a Frankentrooper, using a G.I. Joe Hall of Fame body and a head made from scratch using Super Sculpey. He's joined by Super Ace and Bat Commando, made from a G.I. Joe Sailor figure and a Starting Lineup Ty Cobb, respectively.

And if that wasn't enough, they're backed up by the Bart Brigade! Air Ace Bart, Commando Bart and Seaman Bart were all made from Bart Simpson Bendies, a few dabs of paint and some military hardware.

Nice job, soldier!

HOLY CRAP! LOOKIT ALL THESE OTHER WINNERS!

The ToyFare offices were flooded with entries for this contest, so here's a list of all the other winners we didn't have space to show this month:

Brad Checkett (Captain Batman & First Class Robin), Portland, Ore.
David Rzasa ("Captain" America), Berlin, N.J.
Donald W. Waugh (G.I. Barbie), Ashton, W. Va.
Edward Kozak (Marvel Special Forces), Arcade, N.Y.

TOY BIZ PRESENTS:

THE X-MEN HOMEMADE HEROES CONTEST

Grand Prize (1): One Lucky winner will win an X-Men gift pack, which includes Iceman, Cyclops, Marvel Girl, Beast and Angel. They'll also win a set of X-Men: Super Shooters which includes Wolverine, Apocalypse, Beast and Colossus; and a set of X-Men: Battle Blasters which includes Cyclops, Wolverine, Omega and Jean Grey. Toy Biz will also throw in two random 10 inch X-Men figures from the 1998 line!

First Prize (4): Four lucky grand-prize wannabes will each win one X-Men gift pack and a random 5-inch X-Men figure from either the Super Shooters or Battle Blasters lines!

Are ya diggin' the load of loot you can win? Here's what ya gotta do: Create an X-Men character that has never been produced as an action figure before. You can create one from scratch or mix 'n' match parts from ones that already exist. However ya do it, just make sure they kick ass. Need a little push to get you going? Try these guys on for size: Mimic, the classic X-Men villain; Morph, the shapeshifting freedom fighter from the Age of Apocalypse; or Proteus, the reality-altering mutant son of Moira MacTaggert.

Once you've created your masterpiece, photograph them in different poses and from different angles (FOCUSED!), attach your name, address, phone number, age and what you used to create the figure to the back of EACH photo (but DON'T write on the photo!) and zip them on over. Just remember, if you photograph them in homemade packaging, make sure you also photograph them out of the packaging. And NO Polaroids, gosh darn it! Send in a Polaroid and it's a faceful of adamantium for ya!

Uncanny Jabber

No purchase necessary. Contest is open to anyone except employees of Wizard Entertainment Group, Toy Biz, their immediate families and anybody who makes a Wolverine figure. Toy Biz has already made a "couple." Print your name, date of birth, address, city, state, zip and telephone number with area code on the official entry form or a 3-by-5-inch index card, and attach the form or card to your entry. Top 10 Hottest Action Figures

BY CONTACTING HUNDREDS OF RETAILERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, TOYFARE KEEPS A CLOSE EYE ON THE COUNTRY'S HOTTEST COLLECTIBLE ACTION FIGURES. AND, WELL, HERE THEY ARE...

1. BIGGS DARKLIGHTER

(STAR WARS: POWER OF THE FORCE)

Born David Higgins, Biggs Darklighter's life was a torrid tale of excess and tragedy. Prior to his spectacular death during the Rebellion's desperate stand against the original Death Star, Darklighter starred in a string of moderately successful adult films. His standout entry, "Bigg Daddy," was nominated for several Blue Note awards, but netted just one statue for costume design. Should you manage to find this extremely hot-selling figure, make sure to give the cashier a knowing wink as you exit the store.

2. LAK SIVRAK

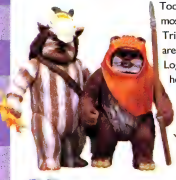
(STAR WARS: POTF)

Lak Sivrak is what Han Solo might have turned into had he seen Princess Leia in her slave gear. Unfortunately, he was pretty much blind the whole time. Actually, this Shistavanen Wolfman was one of the freaky cantina customers in the first Star Wars flick, but Lucas later erased him for the Special Edition. Apparently he also fought in the Battle of Hoth, but we didn't see 'im. He was probably off writing his name in the snow. Wolfmen are like that.

3. EWOKS 2-PACK

(STAR WARS: POTF)

Celebrate the love! Those cuddly Ewoks finally make their updated Kenner debut, and check it out—two at once! That's twice the yub!



Today's kids can finally re-enact the most huggable scenes in the Star Wars Trilogy. Look, Wicket and R2-D2 are playing! How adorable! And look, Logray is the medicine man! He'll heal you…and warm your heart! They're so completely precious, and just so… BBBAAAAAAARRRRFFFFFFFFF!!! Yick. Someone wanna clean that up?

4. YODA

(STAR WARS COLLECTOR SERIES)

Next time you're in the action figure aisle and some crater-faced, unshowered stockboy makes like Frank Oz and tells you, "Ooohh…you seek YODA!" feel free to pierce his throat with a ballpoint pen. No jury in the world would convict you. But why, you might be asking, would lame stockboy humor cause you such grief? 'Cause believe us, you ain't findin' this Yoda figure. Prepare to be frustrated. And keep a pocketful of pens.

5. PURCHASE OF THE DROIDS

(STAR WARS: POTF CINEMA SCENE 3-PACK)

Next time you're in the action figure aisle and an acne-infested, inbred stockboy says, "They should make a Purchase of the 'Purchase of the Droids 3-Pack' 3-Pack, starring you, me and Earl the cashier!" feel free to twist off his left arm and beat him to death with it. This particular set is rarer'n a stockboy with a hot date. Hoo! We sure hope them stockboys don't have access to firearms. There might not be a ToyFare #11.

6. JAWA

(STAR WARS COLLECTOR SERIES)

What kind of role model is Uncle Owen, anyway? No wonder Luke was dyin' to blow the moisture farm. Imagine if your family lived in a town where street gangs drove around in a giant Sandcrawler, selling stolen cars out of the back. Would your dad be out on the front lawn haggling for a cut-rate Datsun? That's all Jawas are, y'know. Car thieves in space. But they're also really hot 12-inch figures. Well, technically, they're 6 inches. Tall, that is. Whew.

7. PRINCESS LEIA IN EWOK CELEBRATION OUTFIT

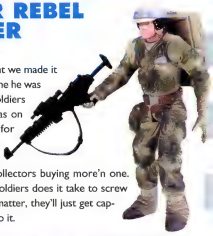
(STAR WARS: POTF)

Is Princess Leia all dressed up for a celebration thrown by Ewoks, or is she celebrating Ewoks themselves? After all, the cuddly monsters brought in huge-ass merchandising dollars, and Carrie Fisher must've got a cut of that pie. At least a tiny little sliver of it, anyway. Right? That'd suck if she didn't. Acting opposite Ewoks must've been painful enough without watching Lucas pocket all the green.

8. ENDOR REBEL SOLDIER

(STAR WARS: POTF)

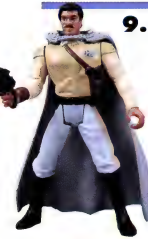
This guy again? We thought we made it perfectly clear just how lame he was last issue. Endor Rebel Soldiers were like Heather Thomas on "The Fall Guy"—mostly for show. Nevertheless, this figure seems to be a big seller, probably due to collectors buying more'n one. How many Endor Rebel Soldiers does it take to screw in a light bulb? It doesn't matter, they'll just get captured and let the Ewoks do it.



9. LANDO CALRISSIAN IN GENERAL'S GEAR

(STAR WARS: POTF)

Wow, a general. Lando got his stars after betraying Han Solo, then escaping to save his own skin and only turning back for Luke after Chewbacca threatened to pull his wings off. Nien Nunb was probably calling the shots in the final battle, too, but Lando got credit 'cause he speaks English. Damn Euro-centric history books.



10. PRINCESS LEIA COLLECTION 2-PACKS

(STAR WARS: POTF)

When you're the only marketable female in a toy line, you sure do work overtime. These babies are white-hot! Thank a Leia-hungry collecting public. Also thank George Lucas for virtually ignoring the fairer sex over the course of three movies. Natalie Portman has her work cut out for her.

Castaway FROM THE ISLAND OF MISFIT TOYS

WING BLAST BATMAN

HIS CRIME: Battling evil with a nummy candy shell. Butterscotch Batman here must've been pretty mad when li'l Tim Drake used up the last of the black spray paint on his school science project. "FINE! I'll just paint my Wing Blast armor BEIGE!" Villains will be smacking their lips when they see Batman coming. And they WILL see him coming—a caramel-covered Dark Knight is pretty hard to miss. Dude, you're loaded—when the gloss black runs out, send Alfred to the friggin' True Value. TF

MARKET WATCH

WHAT?!? WHO?!? HE SAID WHAT?!? THAT'S SELLING FOR HOW MUCH?!? WHEN?!?

Rebels Without a Cause

By Lars Pearson

Will the Force be with us…always?

Oh yeah. But there've been a couple interesting trends of late as Kenner's Star Wars: Power of the Force line struggles to jack out new product until the much-heralded Prequel films arrive in 1999.

The first is that despite a frothy tidal wave of success, the Star Wars line has periodically stalled and the toy racks have been increasingly choked with action figures. To compensate, Kenner, already a master of marketing, paced the release of new action figures and jump-started sales with each debut. It seemed like a good idea.

But those sales bumps were almost entirely due to the hardcore collectors and speculators, those shrewd completists who're crazed enough to buy already-released Star Wars toys in new packaging with nifty gimmicky movie slides. But the public at large, which represents the majority of buyers, doesn't notice these releases to the same degree, and it's difficult to gauge the long-term gain.

The second problem is an increasing level of figures made for those who are—and let's be fair here—Star Wars geeks. For every new figure that looks to be kid-popular, such as the wolfman Lak Sivrak, there's arguably an equal number of ordinary human characters like Grand Moff Tarkin and Mon Mothma.

These figures are a wet dream for Jedi addicts who've spent years campaigning for them, but Star Wars action figures, with their varied blasters and vibro-blades for added play-value, were designed for kids (and let's face it, middle-aged collectors) to re-enact their favorite cinema scenes. And let's face it—the ultimate take-down power of a Tarkin or a Mon Mothma is not very great. The same firepower problem also applies to the Princess Leia two-packs (Leia and Wicket—there's a fierce combination), which have great collector appeal with Leia's cloth costumes, but may only appeal to the average buyer looking to kill two birds with one stone and get two characters at once.

The surest bet of all time is that Star Wars will get a boost from the upcoming Prequel releases. Kenner's already working on the toys, which are shrouded in secrecy. Until then, the line is merely treading water, culling the original Trilogy for obscure characters and mining the untapped potential of the forthcoming "Expanded Universe" releases.

BEAST WARS ROARS WITH SUCCESS

Thank God they're being destroyed.

That's what many smart collectors are saying about Beast Wars, the revamped Transformers line from Hasbro—and we don't mean because fans don't like the toys. Quite the contrary, actually. The metallic robot-animal action figures, fueled by an animated series with dazzling computer effects and strong ratings, are a hit among young males. And as more of the beasties are played with and ravaged by kids, the result is a hell of a lot of fun, a dwindling supply, and best of all, a toy line that might soon erupt on the back market.

If speculators had noticed Beast Wars, this might never have happened. But unlike Star Wars, Star Trek and Batman, which have proven their greater iconic value, Transformers had its height in the 1980s and was the rave of that generation only. Speculators therefore never sealed any Beast Wars toys away, leaving them at the mercy of savage young lads…until now, when a whole new batch of Trans-fans are caught up in the magic of Transformers.

Keep watching the new, sleeper-hit Transmetals assortment—Rhinox and Cheetor are available and there's more due out in April and May. And crazed as it sounds, don't think beasts with low-name recognition such as Manterror or Waspinator won't be hot in the future. They're typically just as cool-looking as their more-popular counterparts, and get made in lesser quantities. Remember, the pterodactyl Swoop from the Transformers line was the lowest-produced Dinobot, and he now sells for double the price of his Dino buddies. So, good Beast hunting to you.

BABYLON AND ON

It's winning so many converts, you'd think the telepathic Psi Corps was brainwashing people.

Even as "Babylon 5" enjoys a huge renaissance on the TNT cable network, response to the show's 9- and 12-inch figures has been so positive that champagne bottles can be heard popping across the universe…or at least in the offices of Exclusive Toys, makers of all toys B5-related. True, some consumers bemoaned that the figures weren't very articulated. But then, few expected to stage fierce battle scenes anyway—since it's kinda hard to fight without any villains—so the criticism mostly didn't matter. And while some said the $15 price tag was steep, it was in line with what collectors were paying for other 9-inch toys.

Do not ignore the premiere batch of 9-inchers, which included Ambassador Delenn, Ambassador Londo Mollari, G'Kar and John Sheridan, since they could trigger a lengthy action-figure wave. Remember: No matter how many variants are released—say, Londo Mollari with peacock headcomb or G'Kar with flowered battle shorts—there will always be an affection for characters in their simplest, purest forms. Not to mention they're all key characters in a show that's an entirely new universe, and thank God for variety.

So good luck, and remember—you can't eat your G'Kar figure, even if he looks like he's begging for some shrimp sauce. TF

ToyFare Price Guide Manager Lars Pearson was the undisputed champ of Story County's greased pig contest. Read into that all you want.

HOW TO USE THE TOYFARE PRICE GUIDE

FIRST OFF...

The following 30-odd pages feature the ToyFare Price Guide, the most accurate and up-to-date action figure price guide in the known universe. To ensure that it's the most bestest price guide available, we stay in contact with hundreds of retailers throughout the country and regularly send scouts to comic/sci-fi/toy shows to see what the li'l buggers are selling for (and which ones are really selling).

But, even with working our fingers to the bone, do keep in mind that a price guide is just that, a GUIDE. Prices most definitely vary depending on local availability and popularity of a figure.

FINDING STUFF...

It's easy, unless you're a contaloupe. The price guide is arranged alphabetically by toy lines. Listings for figures related to movie series (i.e. "The Empire Strikes Back"), are posted alphabetically under the original movie title ["Star Wars"]. When a title has been used several times for a different line, like Star Wars: Power of the Force, we list all lines chronologically.

Skipping articles "A," "An," and "The" at the beginning of a title, alphabetization is word by word, not letter by letter. So, "The Mask" is listed under "Mask," and "The Tick" is listed under "Tick." "Star Trek: Starfleet Academy" comes before "Star Trek: The Next Generation" because we include the article "The" in alphabetizing when it appears as an interior word in the title. Using the one-word-at-a-time approach, all titles starting with the word "Super," including "Super Amigos," are used up before we go on to titles such as "Superman Animated Series." Abbreviations such as "Dr." will be found before titles starting with "Dragon" but after titles starting with "Doctor." Figures with names beginning with numerals—such as "2-1B"—will appear at the top of each listing.

WHY TWO PRICES?

All first-column prices are values for unopened mint figures [MIP, or "Mint in Package"]. Second-column prices are for loose mint figures [LM].

Of course, there are all sorts of grades in between, and if you're the anal type, we've diagrammed a few of them to help make things a little easier. Keep in mind this is only a guide, and percentages can vary depending on several factors, including age, supply and demand for the various grades, retailer location, local availability of a figure and its current popularity.

Any new figure that has just been released but hasn't been widely traded yet is marked with ••.

WHAT'S WHAT...

An annoyingly in-depth look at grading action figures:

NOTE! Always keep in mind that with unopened toys, it's possible for the toy to have one grade and the packaging another. If a toy's unopened, it's most likely mint, barring toys that were flawed during production. But the packaging might have the toy whipped out of it, and grade in good or fair condition. Many ads will stipulate this, such as "unopened figure in good packaging." There's basically no way we can tell you how to adjust for every grading split—you'll just have to go with your gut and reach an arrangement with the buyer/seller. Got it? Good. Power to da man.

MINT (MIP or "Mint in Package") Packaging: Absolutely perfect. No price tag, no bent corner, no minor crease, no nuthin'. This condition is so smegging amazing, it's scarcer than clothes on Madonna. Even new toys on the shelves aren't mint most of the time, so you might as well not worry about it. Stuff that is miraculously mint can fetch 125% to 150% of the MIP price depending on desirability and if it was made before 1990. Post-1990, it just fetches the MIP price. Figure: A perfect figure with no sign of usage. Must include every packaged accessory, all in perfect condition and working order. Can also fetch up to 125%-150% of MIP value—again, depending on desirability and if it was made pre-1990.

NEAR MINT (NM) Packaging: Just a notch or two below perfect. Tiny flaws may include a small tear or crease. Normally fetches 100% of the MIP value. Figure: Just about perfect. Minor smudge/color-flaking. All packaged accessories are present (minor smudge/color flaking acceptable) and in working order.

VERY FINE (VF) Packaging: Several minor tears/creases. Usually 75%-80% of MIP value. Figure: More pronounced smudge/color-flaking. All accessories are present with (possible) more pronounced smudges/flaking.

FINE (FN) Packaging: Multiple tears/creases of a more profound nature, possible corners missing/minor writing. Around 40%-50% of MIP value. Figure: Loose joints, heavy smudge/color flaking, may not contain any accessories.

VERY GOOD (VG) Packaging: Major crease/tears, large portions of packaging missing, significant writing/stains. You're looking at 15%-25% of MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, "wobbly" body parts, may not contain any accessories.

GOOD (G), FAIR (FR) AND POOR (P) Packaging: Heavily torn/creased/written on to the point of obscurity. Sells for about 5%-10% of the MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, excessively loose body parts, portions of figure may be missing (ponytail, capes, etc.), may not contain any accessories. ■

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

The toys in this guide are priced as follows: Prices listed on the left are for mint in package (MIP), meaning that the toys have never been removed from their original packaging. Items not in any packaging (loose) or missing any of their original accessories vary significantly and are generally worth the prices listed on the right. A listing marked with a  means that particular figure has not been released yet from the manufacturer. In some cases, these figures are canceled, and thus, never released.

Remember, this is only a guide, and prices can vary for a variety of reasons, including local scarcity.

Final Fantasy VII (Bandai)/Godzilla, King of the Monsters (Trendmasters)

St. Louis-based Trendmasters has lacked up the toy license for the new Godzilla movie, which is expected to be one of this summer's big blockbusters. This film, the brainchild of "Independence Day" makers Dean Devlin and Roland Emerlich, is a textbook lesson in creating a huge buzz for a movie. For months, trailers have been playing in movie theaters to mesmerized audiences. So far, the entire monster has yet to be seen, with only glimpses of its claw, tail and eye. VENOM-THE MADNESS
Venom: Planet of the Symbiotes (Toy Biz)

A few years ago, 1996 and '97 to be exact, if you were a fan of dreeling monsters you were in heaven. Toy Biz, makers of all sorts of Spider-Man action figures, branched out and made two assortments of toys based on Venom, ex-Spider-Man villain and one freaky looking monster. If you were looking for some icky toys, Venom and his pals were the place to be. So far, it doesn't look like Toy Biz has any Venom action figure lines planned for '98, so fans of this slobbering antihero will have to wait until Venom gets his chance to shine in the spotlight again.

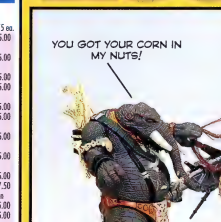
BIG SHOT



POACHER & CORNBOY
Total Chaos (Series 2-McFarlane Toys)

Eagle-eyed comic book readers might have noticed that Total Chaos toy boys Poacher, Cornboy and Smuggler made a cameo appearance in Image Comics' Curse of the Spawn #15-#16. Were these guys intended for the printed page from the get-go, or is this some bizarre coincidence? "They were created as toys, but the writer of the comic just liked them and decided to drop them into the story," McFarlane Toys Collector's Club director Chet Jacques says. "We always get a kick out of it when we see our toys show up in different places, from comics to TV shows."

ABOMINATION
INCREDIBLE HULK (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Tales to Astonish #101 (April 1967)
ORIGIN: The Abomination was spawned from a botched suicide attempt by Bruce Banner, a.k.a. the Hulk. Banner bombarded himself with a lethal dose of gamma radiation in order to destroy the Hulk and prevent the alien Stranger from taking control of his savage alter ego. Unfortunately, Banner was carted off by army security and the machine fell into the hands of Russian spy Emil Blonsky. Blonsky absorbed a massive dose of radiation, and became a monstrous, green-skinned creature with strength that could surpass the Hulk (although his power has subsequently diminished). Babbed the Abomination, he became a frequent thorn in the Jade Giant's side.
CURRENT STATUS: The Abomination recently wandered through the Fleetack tunnels and got his eyes poked by Marrow.
KEY MOMENT: X-Men #74, Warren Worthington, a.k.a. the Angel, encounters the Abomination deep below New York City.

Fantastic Four (Toy Biz)/Marvel Super Heroes
Secret Wars (Mattel)

Good ol' Doctor Doom here is a prime example of how toy companies are more powerful than anything you can ever imagine. Back when Marvel Comics hit it big with the Secret Wars comic book series, Mattel produced an action figure tie-in. When it came around to making a toy out of the Fantastic Four's longtime foe, Mattel wanted to go for a more robot-like appearance. Since these new duds were never a part of comic book continuity, Doom's techno look was written into the storyline instead of being rejected.

BANE

BATMAN: LEGENDS OF THE DARK KNIGHT (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Batman: Vengeance of Bane (1992)

ORIGIN: Bane just wants to know who his daddy is. He was born in a Santa Prisce prison and was jailed for his father's crimes. He trained himself while in prison and turned the hatred inside him toward the Batman. After volunteering for an experiment with the Venom formula, Bane became a hulking brute with monstrous strength. He eventually escaped Arkham City, where he busted into Arkham Asylum and released all of the inmates. Batman, exhausted from the efforts of rounding up Arkham's prisoners, was easily beaten and literally broken by Bane. Jean Paul Valley was able to stop Bane, who is still on the loose and remains a threat to Batman.

CURRENT STATUS: Bane recently tagged around in the pages of Azrael when John Paul Valley got hooked on Venom.

KEY MOMENT: Batman: Vengeance of Bane II. Not enough Bane in your life? Try on this second Bane special and get your fill of Bane.

Star Trek/Star Trek Classic Collection (Playmates)

If there's one thing Star Trek collectors complain about, it's the lack of in-scale vehicles for Playmates' 4 1/2-inch Basic Assortment. Playmates has released the new Star Trek: Strike Force line to remedy this. While these starship replicas are not scaled for the traditional action figures, they offer Star Trek fans the chance to pretend they're Captain Kirk and zoom around in the Enterprise. And that's just what this world needs, more Trekkies who have trouble separating reality from fiction.

DR. STRANGE

SPIDER-MAN/SPIDER WARS (TOY-BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Strange Tales #110 (July 1963)

ORIGIN: Stephen Strange was a brilliant neurosurgeon with lots of money. But a near-fatal automobile accident caused enough nerve damage to keep him from operating ever again. In attempting to repair his damaged nerves, Strange blew all of his fortune and became a drifter. After hearing of an all-powerful man named the Ancient One, Strange traveled to the Ancient One's hideaway in Tibet. Once there, the Ancient One agreed to help Strange so long as he proved himself worthy. During his stay with the Ancient One, Strange uncovered a murder plot concocted by one of his pupils and went on to learn under the Ancient One to take up the mantle of the Earth's Sorcerer Supreme.

CURRENT STATUS: There are rumors that Strange might get his own regular series...again.

KEY MOMENTS: Doctor Strange/Doctor Doom: Triumph and Torment. Doc Strange helps Doc Doom find his mother.

BIG SHOT

GHOST RIDER
Ghost Rider Spirits of Vengeance Cycles & Riders (Toy Biz)

By far, one of the niftiest action features is glow-in-the-dark materials. If you play close attention to all your toys that glow, you'll notice that some glow-in-the-dark toys glow better than others. What's the story? Well, in some cases it's because of slight differences in materials, but the difference is mostly because some toys are merely painted with glow-in-the-dark paints while others are cast entirely in glow-in-the-dark plastics. These here Ghost Rider toys and Moore Action Collectibles' Lady Death variant are prime examples of toys that give a bright enough glow for your buck.

FIGRIN D'AN
STAR WARS: POTF MAIL-AWAY EXCL. (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Star Wars" (1977)

BIOS: Figrin D'an is a fish, an alien species characterized by its unusually large, leathery craniums and big shiny black eyes. He is the leader of Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes, an instrumental band that is known throughout the galaxy and is said to be Jabba the Hutt's favorite. Figrin plays the Klee horn and is joined by Tedn Ha'ro on the Bonnadan Rontvingal, Teds and Ickdahl on fanfares, Nalan on the Bandfill, Tech playing the Ommni Box and occasional backup musician Lirin Can'n on the second Klee horn. And who could forget Sheechy M'rcekov on harmonica?

CURRENT STATUS: Look for Figrin D'an and the Modal Nodes to play a key role in the upcoming Star Wars Prequels.

KEY HINDSIGHT: Hmmm... "Star Wars." The cantina band only showed up in the first "Wars flick, so that's the best, and only, place to check 'em out.

US AIRBORNE RANGER HALO PARACHUTIST, DUKE & SGT. SLAUGHTER

G.I.Joe Classic Collection/G.I.Joe: A Real American Hero (Hasbro)

One of the trademarks of the tough-as-nails G.I. Joe toys is Joe's scar along his right cheek. This manly scratch, which was implemented with the first G.I. Joe toys from the '60s, was conceived as a way to distinguish Joe from other toys out there and to give the action figures a tough appearance. It was thought that the original Joes would be perceived as girls' dolls by young boys, so the battle scar was a way for Joe to have that edge over that milquetoast Ken guy. Strangely, this defect was inexplicably absent from the Real American Hero revival of the '80s.

JUBILEE
GENERATION X (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Uncanny X-Men #244 (May 1989)
ORIGIN: Jubilation Lee became an orphan as a teenager and avoided being shuttled around to different orphanages by running away to the Hollywood Hall. There she used her newfound mutant power to generate "fireworks," small globs of multicolored energy, to entertain passers-by and make a living. Hall security eventually called in the mutant-hunting H Squad. It just so happened that the X-Men women were at the mall at the time, so Jubilee had a little extra weight in her corset. After defeating the H Squad, the women left the mall, and Jubilee secretly followed them. She uncovered the abandoned base of the Reavers and eventually became an X-Man-in-training.
CURRENT STATUS: You can catch Jubilee every month in the pages of Generation X.
KEY MOMENT: Wolverine #72–#74, Jubilee is forced to decide what to do to the thugs who killed her parents.

BOBA FETT & IG-88

Star Wars Collector Series/Star Wars: Shadows of the Empire Vehicles & Accessories (Kenner)

IG-88 just can't get no respect. The first time he got the shaft was with Kenner's original 12-inch line from the '80s. He was one of the last to be produced and shipped in very small quantities. When it came time for Kenner to revive Star Wars for the '90s, IG-88 has been mysteriously absent from the Power of the Force line. While all the other bounty hunters have been offered in the regular assortments, the only place to find IG-88 is in a two-pack with Boba Fett from the Shadows of the Empire line. Sometimes it sucks to be a robot.

MUG SHOT

LONGSHOT
X-MEN (TOY-BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Longshot #1 (September 1985)
ORIGIN: On a distant world, a race without backbones developed exoskeletons that allowed them to walk upright and helped their society advance. A select few called the Spineless Ones rejected the exoskeletons, eventually became the race's leaders and demanded that a scientist named Aziz create a race of slaves. The scientist engineered humanoid slaves that were genetically designed to be intelligent and revolt. Longshot was created to be a superhuman slave and actor for the Spineless One known as Mojo. He became a legendary rebel leader. He was captured and brainwashed by the Spineless Ones, but he escaped and fled to Earth through an interdimensional portal.
CURRENT STATUS: Longshot hasn't been around much lately, but odds are he'll show up in an X-book any day now.
KEY HUNTED: X-Men Annual #10. Longshot meets up with the X-Men and they become the rambunctious X-Babies.

BIG SHOT

CYCLOPS, WOLVERINE & KEN
X-Men vs. Street Fighter (Toy Biz)

With the just-released X-Men vs. Street Fighter action figures, and the upcoming line of toys based on Resident Evil, it looks like Toy Biz is enjoying a healthy relationship with Capcom, makers of the respective video games. There're already plans for another helping of X-Men vs. Street Fighter figures, and an assortment based on Resident Evil 2 but Capcom also makes a Marvel Super Heroes video game. Does this mean Toy Biz will make video game-style versions of other Marvel mainstays? Looks like we'll just have to wait and see...

MALAKILI

STAR WARS POTF II (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Return of the Jedi" (1983)

SERIES: The baby animal handler known as Malakili hails from the Corellian system and began his illustrious career as a zookeeper and trapper. He joined up with the Circus Horrificus, a traveling sideshow full of all sorts of nasty critters. After working seven seasons with the show, he went to Tatooine to take care of the ferocious Rancor kept by scoundrel Jabba the Hutt.

Everything was going fine until Jedi Knight Luke Skywalker was thrown into the Rancor's pit and destroyed the vicious monster. When his pet creature died Malakili was despondent, but he quickly snapped out of his funk when Jabba's sideshow exploited over the Pit of Carkoon.

CURRENT STATUS: This portly dude supposedly joined up with Jabba's crew and showed up the Crystal Moon, a restaurant in Mos Eisley. Darn's good eats.

KEY MINIFIG: "Return of the Jedi." Check out Malakili for all of three seconds in the final installment of George Lucas' Trilogy.

DAISY DUKE & DUKE NUKEM

Duke Nukem (ReSaurus)

Riding the popular wave of video games getting the action figure treatment is Duke Nukem from ReSaurus. This bad boy's the star of, naturally enough, Duke Nukem, a Doom-style first person shoot-em-up full of vile and nasty creatures and some totally un-P.C. gameplay. Naturally, your Duke figure needs some monsters to trash, so ReSaurus is serving up action figures of some of the game's creatures, like BattleLord, Octabrain and PigCop. Check out part two of our "Toy Fair Special Report" for pics!

MUG SHOT

MYSTIQUE
X-MEN MONSTER ARMOR (TOY-BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: as Raven Darkholme Ms. Marvel #16 (April 1978) as Mystique Ms. Marvel #18 (June 1978)

ORIGIN: Not much is known about Raven Darkholme, the shape-shifting, blue-skinned mutant known as Mystique. She is the mother of the acrobatic mutant Nightcrawler and the foster mother of Rogue. In her guise of Raven Darkholme, Mystique rose through the ranks of the United States government to a respected position in the Department of Defense. She used her power to help organize and conceal the activities of the second Brotherhood of Evil Mutants, consisting of herself; the Blob, Destiny and Pyro.

COMMENT STATUS: Check out X-Factor for the latest on Mystique before the book gets canceled.

KEY HOWDIT: Uncanny X-Men #141–142. Mystique and the Brotherhood of Evil Mutants attempt an assassination on Senator Robert Kelly in the classic "Days of Future Past" story.

BIG SHOT

BLACK SEA VENOM & WEB TRAPS SPIDER-MAN

Spider-Man Web Splashers/Spider-Man: Web Traps (Toy Biz)

Toy Biz's Spider-Man Web Splashers line was one of the big hits of '97, with both collectors and kids. It was such a success, in fact, that Toy Biz is going back to the well, so to speak, for another go-'round. The difference this time? Not only do seafaring figures such as Kayak Spidey, Aqua Tech Namor, Hydro-Venom and Wind Attack Spidey float on water, but they also feature special water-pumping cannons to blast the bejeezus out of anything and everything.

POISON IVY

BATMAN: THE ANIMATED SERIES (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Batman: TAS episode "Pretty Poison"

ORIGIN: Botanist Pamela Isley used to develop new fragrances for a cosmetics company, until she saw Harvey Dent inadvertently destroy an endangered plant at a ground-breaking ceremony at Stone Gate Prison. She took the name Poison Ivy and used her immunity to poisons to attempt to kill Dent, who would later become Two-Face, with a special poisonous lipstick. Naturally her evil scheme was thwarted by Batman. Poison Ivy combines seductive beauty with deadly charms to carry out her evil schemes, and she sometimes makes use of genetically-engineered plant creatures.

CURRENT STATUS: Poison Ivy pops up occasionally on the "New Batman Adventures" on the Kids' WB!

KEY MOMENT: "Almost Got 'Im." Poison Ivy and a bunch of Batman's deadliest foes get together and swap stories of how they almost defeated the Dark Knight detective.

12-INCH BATMAN, WIND-BLITZ BATGIRL & HARLEY QUINN

Batman & Robin Vehicles & Accessories/Adventures of Batman & Robin/Adventures of Batman & Robin D.I.C Force (Kenner)

It's a pretty safe bet to say that the Joel Schumacher brainchild "Batman & Robin" was one of the worst pieces of trash ever committed to celluloid. This flick was so bad, in fact, that it's almost impossible to come up with the slightest redeeming quality. Well, come to think of it, we can come up with one: the 12-inch Batman action figure. This super-poseable Batman figure bears a menacing grimace patterned after "ER" star George Clooney and features some nifty plastic armor. If only this toy was out when we were kids...

RHINO
AMAZING SPIDER-MAN (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Amazing Spider-Man #85 (November 1970)

ORIGIN: The man known as the Rhino used to be a small time thug and musclemen until he was hired by two criminals to be the subject of an experiment to create a superhuman assassin. His strength was augmented through radiation and he was outfitted with a skintight costume made from a rough material similar to a rhinoceros' hide. His first assignment was to take out John Jameson, astronaut and son of newspaper publisher J. Jonah Jameson. His attempt was foiled by Spider-Man, who became one of the Rhino's frequent adversaries. During a fiery space shuttle crash, the Rhino's costume melted and became permanently attached to his body.

CURRENT STATUS: The Rhino recently showed up in Ka-Zar, revived and augmented by Revered Plumbot.

KEY MOMENT: Amazing Spider-Man #268–270. Outfitted with a new costume, the Rhino joins up with the Sinister Syndicate.

CAPTAIN AMERICA, THOR & ISZS

Spider-Man: Electro Spark/Avengers (Toy Biz)/
Spawn (Series 4-McFarlane Toys)

One of last year's biggest surprises was Toy Biz's collector-driven Avengers line. It offered up some damn fine versions of classic characters like Thor, Loki and the Scarlet Witch and proved to be a hit with fans. So is there any chance for another go-round? Sadly, there's nothing planned so far for '98, but with plans in the works for an animated Avengers cartoon, there's a pretty good chance that Earth's mightiest heroes will be making another appearance at toy stores in the future.

RIDDLER

SUPER AMIGOS (PACIPA)

FIRST APPEARANCE Detective Comics #140 (October 1948)
ORIGIN All his life, Edward Nigma has been fascinated by puzzles and different ways to solve them. He ran a puzzle booth at a carnival where he would match his wits with hapless passers-by. Naturally, Nigma ripped the contents and cheated several people out of their money. In an effort to broaden his horizons, he became the Riddler, a thief who would befuddle the police with numerous clues and puzzles related to his crimes. Naturally, the Riddler's schemes caught the attention of Gotham's protector, the Batman, who has foiled his crimes countless times. Although he does not possess any superpowers or super strength, the Riddler has always been one of Batman's greatest enemies.
COMMENT STATUS The Riddler's probably in custody again after busting out the Cleanmster.
KEY MOMENT Secret Origins Special, Uncover the stories behind the Riddler and some of Batman's deadliest foes.

SNAKE EYES & TIE FIGHTER

G.I.Joe: A Real American Hero (Hasbro)/Star Wars POTF II Vehicles & Accessories (Kenner)

One of the biggest driving forces behind Hasbro's long-running and mega-popular 3 3/4-inch G.I. Joe: A Real American Hero toy line was the large number of vehicles and accessories available. More than any other line before or since, play patterns for G.I. Joe depended on the myriad of tanks, planes and cannons that could be paired with the forces of Joe and Cobra. The small size of these figures made it relatively easy for Hasbro to tool up vehicles that could carry all the figures in the line and keep them at a reasonable price point.

ROADBLOCK

G.I. JOE: A REAL AMERICAN HERO (HASBRO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: G.I. Joe #22 (April 1984)

ORIGIN: All Marvin Kinman wanted to do was become a world-famous gourmet chef. While working as a bouncer to raise cash to enroll in a French cooking school, an army recruiter convinced him to enlist and get his culinary experience in the armed services. Unfortunately, poor Marvin didn't realize that army dudes only eat potatoes and lima beans. With his hopes of becoming a gourmet chef crushed, he did the next best thing and picked up a big honkin' machine gun and joined up with the super-elite G.I. Joe team.

CURRENT STATUS: G.I. Joe: A Real American Hero action figures made a comeback of sorts in toy stores in '97, but sadly it doesn't look like there'll be any such luck for the comics and cartoons.

KEY MOMENT: G.I. Joe #24. After capturing Cobra Commander, Roadblock and crew don't have too long to celebrate, as the villain makes his escape.

BIG SHOT

THE GOAT & SPAWN III
The Goat (Acclaim)/Spawn (Series 7-McFarlane Toys)

By far the strangest action figure to be released in the last few years is the Goat from the fine folks at Acclaim Comics. Just what's the deal with this guy, who is billed as being fully inarticulated, non-poseable and non-toxic? Well, he's Vincent Van Goat, who also happens to go by the name H.A.E.D.U.S., which stands for Heavily Armored Espionage Deadly Uber-Sheep. This little guy comes from the pages of Quantum & Woody, the world's worst superhero team, and one of the few under-appreciated gems in the comic book biz.

SABRETOOTH

X-MEN VS. STREET FIGHTER (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE. Iron Fist #14 (August 1977)

ORIGIN. The savage and uncontrollable mutant Creed worked for the U.S. government alongside a Canadian operative known as Logan. He became a test subject in the mysterious "Weapon X" program and had his beast-like powers augmented. After running from the program, Sabretooth became a freelance assassin and eventually joined the Marauders, the group of renegade mutants responsible for the slaughter of the Morlocks. Sabretooth was eventually captured by the X-Men, who tried to restrain and control him through various means, including a high-tech restraining collar. However, Sabretooth was able to break free and still poses a threat to mankind.

CURRENT STATUS. You can get your fill of Sabretooth in recent issues of just about any X-Men title out there.

KEY MOMENT. Uncanny X-Men #212, #213. Welcome to, Sabretooth. 'Nuff said.

BIG SHOT

AMBASSADOR G'KAR & CAPT. JOHN SHERIDAN

Babylon 5 (Exclusive Toys)

Exclusive Toys' new 6-inch Babylon 5 action figures are keen and all, but some collectors have been wondering why the toys came with miniature spaceships from the popular sci-fi TV show and not some big, honkin' guns that seem to be a prerequisite for action figures nowadays. We went to Exclusive's vice president Reg Brack for the scoop. "From the feedback we've received so far, we feel that collectors generally like the miniature vehicles. We actually have some interesting ideas for the future of the line as far as accessories go, but you'll just have to wait and see what they are."

TARANTULA

SPIDER-MAN: SPIDER FORCE (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Amazing Spider-Man #134 (July 1974)
ORIGIN: Anton Miguel Rodriguez was part of a small band of South American revolutionaries. He was a little too bloodthirsty for the rebels and was thrown out, only to sign up with the dictatorial government of his homeland. The government gave him the guise of the Tarantula, intending him to become a counterpart to the United States' Captain America. Rodriguez's brutal nature again took over, and he was forced to flee the country for American soil. Once in New York City, the Tarantula became a foe of Spider-Man, until he committed suicide after mutating into a big hairy spider thing.
CURRENT STATUS: The mantle of the Tarantula is now held by Luis Alvarez, who is currently still at large.
KEY MOMENT: Amazing Spider-Man #233.#236. The Tarantula undergoes a mutagenic treatment that transforms him into a humanoid spider.

SUPER-SIZE SPAWN & MANGA SPAWN
Spawn Super-Size Figures/Spawn (Series 9-McFarlane Toys)

How cool is McFarlane Toys' new Manga Spawn action figure? What makes this figure cooler than cool is its nifty pop-up head. We asked McFarlane Toys Collector's Club director Chet Jacques to explain what makes this special feature tick. "It's just a spring-loaded head so you're able to pull the robotic insect head off, which makes for a really neat insectoid cyber bug thing. There's another Manga Spawn line coming soon, and it includes Samurai Spawn, who has a pop-off head that combines with his shield and lance to make a giant mosquito."

TRITON
FANTASTIC FOUR (TOY-BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Fantastic Four #345 (December 1965)
ORIGIN: The Inhumans Triton is the elder brother of Karnak, and was mutated into a green-skinned aquatic humanoid after being exposed to the Terrigen Mist. As a result of his mutations, Triton was forced to spend his youth underwater, until a cumbersome breathing apparatus was developed. When he reached maturity, Triton became the Inhumans' undersea scout, making sure that no humans learned of the hidden island of Attilan where the Inhumans made their home. When the Inhumans were forced to move Attilan to the Blue Area of the Moon, Triton spent most of his time exploring ancient water tunnels deep below the lunar surface.
CURRENT STATUS: It's a pretty safe bet that Triton will show up in the new Inhumans monthly series.
KEY MOMENT: Avengers #195. Triton travels to NYC to warn the Avengers of the Inhumans' involvement in the Kree-Skrull War.

Spawn (Series 7-McFarlane Toys)

There have been some downright strange-looking characters popping up in McFarlane Toys' Spawn action figure lines. For a toy line based on a comic book, there have been quite a few toys that have little or no tie-in with the monthly Spawn series. "In most cases, the toy line is separate from the comic book line," McFarlane Toys Collector's Club director Chet Jacques explains. "Different people buy the comics than the toys and vice versa so we like to cross-pollinate. Characters don't always have to appear in the comic books to make it to the toy lines."

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

Beanie Babies

Welcome to the Beanie Babies price guide—your up-to-date listing of those plush, squishy little animal critters produced by Ty.

For those who've been out of the loop, Beanie Babies have been a buying fad across America for some months now. Often, the toys are bought by collectors, who snatch up a Beanie as soon as it retires in the hopes of it seeing a price increase. The remainders are bought by people who think the toys look darn cute.

Keep in mind, there are a lot of Beanie copycats out there, so always go by the Ty label if you wanna know if you're holding a genuine Beanie. Also be aware if you're a collector that the Beanies weren't built to last throughout eternity—meaning you gotta look 'em over before you buy—and they're worth dramatically less if the tag is missing. Got it? Ready...break!

BEANIE PRICES

NOTE: On Beanie Babies with old swing tags, add $10-$15. Beanies with no tag are worth 50% less than price shown. An (R) indicates a Beanie has been "retired."

TOYING AROUND

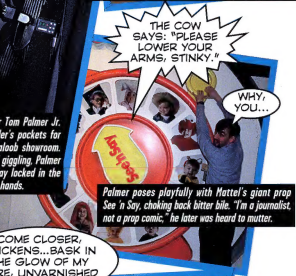
FAIR FARE II

THE SECOND-GREATEST TOY FAIR STORIES EVER TOLD

ToyFare Editor Scott Beatty mistakes Mattel's new Toss & Tickle Me Elmo for Squeeze & Vomit Blood Bert, for which advance sales are reportedly poor.

ToyFare Assistant Editor Tom Palmer Jr. goes through Darth Vader's pockets for spare change at the Galoob showroom. After the "prop" started giggling, Palmer spent the rest of the day locked in the men's room washing his hands.

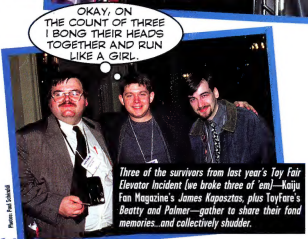
Spokesmodel Amanda demonstrates the new Bead Blast Barbie play pattern while Mattel's evil Supreme Commander, Jennykins, watches via the wall-mounted tele-screen.



Palmer poses playfully with Mattel's giant prop See 'n Say, choking back bitter bile. "I'm a journalist, not a prop comic," he later was heard to mutter.

ToyFare's Beatty, Palmer and Copy Editor Tom Root gave the high-tech "Power Rangers in Space" simulated ride a whirl...right after lunch. Real bright, guys. Wanna clean that up now?

Former Marvel Comics Editor-in-Chief Jim Shooter touts Mattel's new Toy Story line.



Three of the survivors from last year's Toy Fair Elevator Incident (we broke three of 'em)—Kaiju Fan Magazine's James Kapaztos, plus ToyFare's Beatty and Palmer—gather to share their fond memories...and collectively shudder.

Mattel's new WNBA Barbie drains the trey with assistance from the lovely and talented Margarete.
